Notes for MARTHA JANE HARTT:

Dallas Morning News, The (TX) - May 12, 1999

Deceased Name: Rites held for Martha McClenny, mother of actress Morgan Fairchild

Martha Jane Hartt McClenny came from a family of debaters and lawyers.

When her youngest daughter didn't want to give an oral book report in the sixth grade, the Richardson High School English teacher thought a children's acting school might ease her fears. In the acting class, the quiet child exhibited a natural talent for the stage. She and her sister blossomed into actresses at Dallas' Theatre Three. That daughter's name is Morgan Fairchild, the flashy blonde who set a benchmark for glitzy women with an attitude on television's Falcon Crest just as her mother retired in 1981. What Mrs. McClenny did for her shy daughter is similar to what she did for her students, said her other daughter, Cathryn Hartt of Miami. "She thought every one of her students was special," Ms. Hartt said. "She had the ability to make you believe you were special. Her students really adored her." Mrs. McClenny, 74, died May 4 of complications of a stroke at Walnut Place nursing center. Services were Friday in Dallas for the retired teacher, who was buried in Restland Memorial Park. Ms. Fairchild said that she is often recognized in airports - not just as an actress, but also as Mrs. McClenny's daughter. "Almost a month doesn't go by that someone comes up to me in an airport and says, "Oh, your mother made Julius Caesar live for me," " Ms. Fairchild said. "She did that for a lot of people." Her mother was witty and contributed something special to any gathering of people, the actress said. "She was one of those people who made everyone around her feel better about themselves," Ms. Fairchild said. In everyone she met, Mrs. McClenny instilled the notion to follow your heart, Ms. Hartt said. "She was one of those really amazing teachers," she said. Both of Mrs. McClenny's daughters became professional actors, but she wasn't a stage mother, simply a big fan of her daughters' works. "Mom was there for us through every single rehearsal," Ms. Hartt said. Born in Dallas, Mrs. McClenny was a graduate of Southern Methodist University. After teaching briefly in Irving, Mrs. McClenny spent the rest of her career at Richardson High School, where she taught junior English for 24 years, retiring in May 1981. In the '60s, Mrs. McClenny used the work of Bob Dylan and the Beatles to teach poetry, her daughter said. "If you wanted her to, she'd do your astrology chart for you," Ms. Hartt said. "She was a very cool teacher. She was a cool mom." Mrs. McClenny had many friends. "She just was a remarkable soul who will be really, really missed by a lot of people," Ms. Hartt said. "It's hard to talk about it now without crying, because she was just a remarkable person. If you walked into a room with my mother, everybody in the room would be around my mother and laughing." In addition to her daughters, Mrs. McClenny is survived by her husband, Edward Milton McClenny of Dallas.
